

Same Grodan Products, Same Grodan Quality

We want to share some exciting news with you! Our Hugo blocks are now also being produced in our factory in Milton, ON. Thanks to your loyalty and support of our products, we needed the added manufacturing to ensure we were meeting your needs.

You may have noticed a few changes with the Grodan Hugo and Pargro Biggie products with the change. Some blocks may appear to be a lighter color and the groove pattern on the bottom has changed. These are still the high quality Grodan and Pargro products you know and love. So why the changes?

COLOR

You may have noticed that the new products are slightly different in color than the old products. This is because the source basalt material is coming from a different quarry. Grodan and Pargro products are made from basalt rock, the most abundant material in the Earth's crust. The mineral content of basalt can vary from one location to another, thus affecting the coloration of the finished product. The color has no effect on performance of the material.

GROOVE PATTERN

The groove pattern on the bottom of the blocks has also changed from many smaller grooves and ridges to fewer larger grooves and ridges. This is due to the upgrade in the machinery that produces the blocks at the factory outside of Toronto, ON Canada. You will still see blocks with many smaller grooves and these blocks are made in our factory in Holland.

LARGER BOX

The case count for Hugo and Biggie blocks has increased from 48 to 64. This is to increase the packaging process effectiveness and reduce the cost of shipping our product. The 64-count boxes are configured to completely fill a trailer. Under the old configuration, there would have been a lot of unused space within a truck and we would have had to increase the cost of our products to cover the increased costs of shipping. This new configuration allows us to keep the prices down for you.

QUALITY AND TESTING

Regardless of whether the products are made in Canada or Holland, they are all held to the same strict quality testing to which all Grodan products have always been subjected. The quality standards and testing procedures for all our factories are the same, ensuring you only get the highest quality Grodan products available.
